Sullivan Creative Opens Office in Littleton to Serve North Country Clients

Littleton, NH –Sullivan Creative, a results-driven brand and event marketing firm, recently opened an office in Littleton (NH) at the Opera House building on 2 Union Street to better serve its North Country clients. “We have been working with clients in this part of New Hampshire for the past four years and are thrilled to be part of the local business community,” said owner Pam Sullivan. Sullivan Creative is working with area businesses and chambers of commerce to drive business and tourism to the region.

Sullivan Creative is currently working with the North Country Chamber of Commerce on a guide that highlights North Country events, activities, and businesses. For the Androscoggin Valley Chamber of Commerce, Sullivan Creative developed an adventure guide to promote tourism and is assisting with the promotion of the Chamber’s three major events. Sullivan Creative’s event marketing plan for the Lancaster Grand Prix vintage snowmobile race in late January/early February resulted in attracting more than 1,600 snowmobile enthusiasts. Since early 2014, Sullivan Creative has been working with Fuller’s Sugarhouse, located in Lancaster (NH), providing a range of marketing services, including email campaigns, print and online advertising, web, and social media. With the Northern Community Investment Corporation, Sullivan Creative is providing marketing services to small business owners in the North Country to help them jump start their businesses.

Sullivan Creative provides integrated marketing and creative services that make a difference for our clients. We build awareness, generate excitement, and get results for businesses, non-profits, and organizations that focus on the arts, travel and tourism, health and wellness, and economic development.
